If you aren't familiar with Photoshop Elements, our detailed Photoshop Elements tutorial covers all the basics, and we also review other features like PhotoPaint. If you need a more detailed review of Photoshop Elements, you can read our review of Photoshop Elements 16. In this Photoshop Elements tutorial, we'll be reviewing the most important features of Photoshop Elements 18. The Slice and Dice tool This powerful tool is one of the new core features in Photoshop Elements 18. The tool is useful for slice and dice images. Simply place the Slice and Dice tool on the image, then click on the slice you want to get rid of, and a virtual scissors will pop out and cut the part of the image you want. When you click again, a stack of other images will come out. You have total control over how many slabs of the original image you want to keep, and the new image will have the portions you sliced away. It's important to note that the Slice and Dice tool doesn't operate on just any layer. It works only on one image at a time, so before you start using it, make sure you have selected a layer on the image you're editing. The new Magic Selection brush You can also use the Magic Selection brush to quickly select an area of the image and hide it. Simply brush an area with the Magic Selection brush, and it will disappear from the image. If you select the Move tool and set the Move selection by area option, the Magic Selection will move along with the cursor. Once you select the area you want to hide, simply brush over it and it will be hidden. To show it again, brush over the invisible area and the selection will reappear. There's one notable difference between the Magic Selection brush and other selection tools you may be familiar with. Using the Magic Selection brush doesn't leave a visible selection behind. That's because there's no need for it. With the Magic Selection brush, you're using the selection technique of removing a part of the image to hide it. Hover to get brush tips When you're using the Magic Selection brush, the brush icons turn into brush tips. The three brush tips at the top of the screen inform you of the type of brush you're using and the brush size. a681f4349e

The deployment of an international coalition of ships, led by the United States, to enforce sanctions on North Korea has caused a dramatic drop in illegal ship-to-ship transfers of illicit materials across the Northern Limit Line (NLL), between the Korean and Japan. Rear Adm. Philip Davidson of the U.S. Fifth Fleet said in a statement on Monday that one vessel carrying 20 tons of smuggled coal turned back during an interception in the middle of the NLL on Tuesday. Davidson, however, said the North Korean navy had not responded to an "en masse" deployment of ships from the U.S., Japan and Australia. The NLL is the de facto border between the U.S.-backed South and the North. The Chinese government said it has sent a delegation of officials to Pyongyang, The Guardian reported. The sanctions come after Pyongyang carried out its sixth and most powerful nuclear test on Sept. 3. China's Foreign Minister Wang Yi said on Monday that Beijing is "willing to continue to consult with the U.S. and expand cooperation on (North Korea) issue," the Chinese government said in a statement. "China will continue to work with the DPRK and its relevant countries and actively participate in the relevant U.N. agencies' dialogue with the DPRK." The NLL was created by the United Nations Security Council (UNSC) in 1958 to serve as a demilitarized buffer between the two countries. Although the NLL has historically been a source of tension between the two Koreas, South Korea says the zone was the most effective part of the 1953 Armistice Agreement that ended the fighting in the Korean War. The agreement called for the demilitarized zone to be divided into two sections: The Korean Demilitarized Zone (KDMZ) along the 38th parallel and the NLL. The North Korean government has made attempts to annex the NLL in the past, but the two countries have maintained the neutrality of the zone. South Korea's National Defense Commission said on Tuesday in a statement that the most recent case of an NLL interception was the first in the past five years, Korean broadcaster KBS reported. The commission said Kim Jong Un's regime is "grappling with sanctions" by trying to illicitly transport materials into the country to make nuclear weapons and ballistic missiles, The Guardian reported.

Q: Searching for pages that contain the same words This is probably an easy question for some of you but I'm stuck with it. I have an array with a bunch of keywords, now I want to find pages on the same site that contains the keywords in their title and description. As I'm learning to code I figured that this would be something that could be useful. Hope someone can help me out! A: Try this: ([^/i, $gethtml, $matches); $words = array_combine($keywords, array_map('strtolower', $words[1])); $found = array_intersect_key($words, array_flip($keywords)); if ($found) { $results[] = "$word"; } } if (!empty($results)) { var_dump($results); } ?> I'm using strtolower() to change all words to lowercase. The simple preg_match_all() select all 'a' tags, starting after the opening '1.
