Amazon.com,.Q: How to check if two folders are synched? How to check if two folders are synced? I want to know if in a remote server there are new changes in my local server. There are no clients/clients involved. Both are syncing via an online cloud server. A: I'm assuming, from your use of the word "synching", that you have a cron-like service that periodically compares the files on your local machine with those on the remote machine. If that's the case, the synch has failed if there are changes since the last time it ran. So, the answer is: diff /path/to/remote/folder /path/to/local/folder | grep > if no changes, the synch failed Or, diff -Nur /path/to/remote/folder /path/to/local/folder If you want to know what files have changed, use the -u flag: diff -Nur /path/to/remote/folder /path/to/local/folder I tend to use diff's "-b" flag to create a diff from the last version of the remote
