Evaluation of induced nitrous oxide emissions from fish in New Zealand and estimation of the global emission factor. Induced N₂O emissions from small freshwater fish were measured at four sites in two of New Zealand's freshwater catchments. The sites spanned an average of seven orders of magnitude in terms of dissolved oxygen (DO) and nitrate-N (NO₃-N) concentrations. Emissions were in general proportional to NO₃-N concentrations, consistent with the denitrification potential hypothesis for fish-induced N₂O emissions. Emissions from the sites in the Tasman and Waikato catchments were similar to those measured elsewhere in the world. Calculations of the global N₂O emission factor (EF) were performed on the basis of these sites, the distribution of fish species across the global catchment area, and the proportional relationship between fish size and N₂O fluxes. For the global EF, the main factors were likely to be the proportional relationship between fish size and N₂O flux, the proportional relationship between fish abundance and N₂O flux, and the fact that fish dominate the total N₂O flux over wide ranges of environmental conditions. The estimated global EF of N₂O released from fish is $\sim 4.5 \times 10^{(-11)}$ mol N₂O m⁽⁻²⁾ fish size⁽⁻¹⁾. Marguerite D'Antin Marguerite D'Antin (15 July 1855 – 1 July 1925) was a French salonist and collector of Japanese art. Early life D'Antin was born in Paris, the daughter of the noted artist Henri Benveniste D'Antin (1822–1897) and the American-born, Paris-based socialite Sarah P. Whiting, a daughter of Benjamin H. Whiting and Elizabeth Whiting Pierce. The family's lavish lifestyle and exotic foreign travels, especially to Japan, had a strong influence on her and her siblings. Career After her husband Francis (François) D'Antin (1855–1907), a wealthy Parisian banker, died, she became the principal owner and holder of the Benveniste collection of Japanese art. Her friend,

Q: Add custom script to helper file in Rails How do I add a custom script to a helper file in Rails? Here is what I'm trying to do: My view has a dropdown that shows the user profiles. It has a range of years and in order to show the year, I need to include a helper file from the /helpers directory. This is the current view code: 'experience-select' %> 'Select a Year' %> If I add a helper file that contains 'Select a Year' %> It works, but I don't want to add that in all my view files. Is there a way to add it in the helper file? A: You can define a module that does that and import it in any view you want, something like this: module YearsHelper def select_year select_tag :experience, options_for_select(user.experience), :prompt => 'Select a Year' end end Then you can call it as a method of any object, in your view, like this: select_year You can read more about modules here: if(DRIVERS_AVR_ATMEGA) find_path(NEWTON_DIR NAMES newton.h HINTS
${CMAKE_INSTALL_PREFIX} ${CMAKE_CURRENT_SOURCE_DIR}/../newton
${CMAKE_CURRENT_SOURCE_DIR}/../ 1d6a3396d6

What's New In?

Adept PDF to PowerPoint Converter is a powerful, free, and fast PDF to PPTX converter. It enables you to convert PDF to PPTX without suffering from system memory shortage. About: Adept PDF to PowerPoint Converter is a PDF converter for Windows which converts PDF to PPTX. PDF is a great way to store or transfer documents between users. For presentations or briefings, PowerPoint will do a better job. However, PDF files are easier to set up, but they are hard to deploy the same as a PPT project does. If your PDF files are good enough to be used as presentations, why not convert them to actual PPT/PPTX? Adept PDF to PowerPoint Converter can help you quickly convert your PDF files without too much impact on the source's quality. Basic UI design This application focuses on functionality first, so don't expect a shiny layout. Toolbars or dropdown menus are missing entirely. Besides the loading dock, preview area, and a couple of output settings, there isn't much else to work with. Drag and drop as many PDFs as you like Use the drag and drop feature or manually add your documents. Each PDF can be inspected in regard to its pages. Use the small preview pane to see what is within a document's pages. Removing selected items from the list is also a walk in the park. Use the context menu to remove a PDF from the list, or select it and click on the Remove button. As for choosing an output location, that can be done in two ways. You either specify a directory for the PPTX files to be generated in or use the same folder as the source file. Clicking Start Converting will process the entire list, wrapping everything up. A straightforward PDF to PPTX converter Adept PDF to PowerPoint Converter is not unique nor innovative when we talk about such type of tools, but it makes up through speed and efficiency. This program will surely come in handy for users who don't like to waste time on needless details. Fill in the list, click a button, and your PDF is going to be safely migrated to PPTX.
