Daily for Firefox Description Daily is a well-designed and easy-to-use extension for Firefox that brings you the latest, relevant news items from a variety of well-known news sources. This would be one of the best extensions for firefox. It is very good. Eduard Van Dijk Thanks for the comment! If you like this extension, please also check out my other two top free extensions for Firefox and Chrome respectively: Version 1.5.4 : [Download] [Recommend] Version 1.4 : [Download] [Recommend] As a side note, I'd also like to say that I've recently opened my own blog here, in case anyone's interested in seeing what I've got to say. Eduard Van Dijk Thanks for the recommendation! I'm looking forward to reading your blog. :) Omar Such a great extension. Although I'm a Java developer, I find it very useful to keep track of the latest news that I will probably use in my job. Also, it has a great UI. I think it would be great to include this extension as a default installation for all Firefox users. Eduard Van Dijk Thanks for the kind words! I really appreciate your support, and if you'd like to support Daily in return, you can click on the "Follow" button below. Have a great day! :) very efficient and effective! so many less web sites as to load! thumbs up to the author! Renard Magenta I'm a developer myself and enjoy knowing about any new developments in technology (not just in terms of programming though). I often have 5-6 tabs open at once, and I love that this extension allows me to keep up with what's going on in these tabs. I can also configure the extension to give me updates on certain tags. Well done! Eduard Van Dijk I'm really glad you like the extension. Thanks for the kind words! :) [Recommend] Eduard Van Dijk Thanks for the recommendation! Daily For Firefox

Daily is a plugin for Firefox that allows you to enjoy the most up-to-date news feed in an easy-to-use way. When you open a new tab, you will see a list of news titles; in the list, you will also find a link for each title that will open that article in a new tab. For: Firefox Version: 1.2 Date Released: 2012-10-17 1.2 1.0 While the fact that the Firefox is the most popular browser of the moment is not in question, it is indeed remarkable that the Firefox extension Puffin doesn't appear in Google's monthly report. Its absence, which is totally inexplicable, is surely being felt by developers, as they would have learned about many new and potentially useful extensions. The extension can be downloaded for free from the official Firefox repository, but it has a feature called "patches" that are, well, not free. The extension will give you a quick look at the features available in the browser. If you like what you see, you will definitely want to try the full version, which is available at the official Puffin website. There is a demo version available that will allow you to see the features before buying. The fact that its devs are offering this free demo is a guarantee that the extension is well-tested. The full version of the Puffin extension provides a lot of interesting features, such as: A quick look at the extensions and add-ons that are installed in the Firefox browser An overview of the recently opened pages An extension to keep track of your favorite links An extension to open images in a new tab Some additional information about your browser Some other utilities and tools Description: The Firefox extension Puffin is dedicated to making your browsing easier. It provides a quick look at the extensions and add-ons that are installed in the Firefox browser, and an overview of the recently opened pages. If you like what you see, you will definitely want to try the full version, which is available at the official Puffin website. What's New In?

Devs are known to be busy people, and like most busy people who are also passionate about their jobs, they always seek to stay at the top of their game by being well-informed. But actively seeking reliable and diverse news sources takes a lot of time, which can be frustrating if your main concern is, well, coding. If you're a developer who wants to always be up-to-date while keeping distractions at a minimum, then you might enjoy this extension for Firefox called Daily. A relevant news feed every time you open a new tab Supposedly, Daily is made by developers for developers, with the clear purpose of keeping them au courant with all the latest news items. But believe it or not, devs are human too, which means that they don't search only for news about JavaScript and Python; some may also be interested in entrepreneurship, while others may actively seek personal development tips. So it's great that, before you start using Daily, you must first select at least five topics of interest (in the form of tags), which range from #tech and #java to #career and #psychology. Naturally, you can change them later. After you've made your choices, simply open a new tab and enjoy Daily. A customizable well-designed extension Since the news items are beautifully displayed in the browser window, it's very easy to scroll and skim through the titles. The extension shows you the approximate amount of time necessary for reading each article, but also allows you to bookmark items for later. The GUI is also customizable, as you're able to switch between light and dark mode, but also change the feed's layout. I've mentioned above that you can always choose other interest tags, but you can also add more news sources to your feed or remove the ones that you're not satisfied with. Since it only opens in a new tab, you could assume that Daily won't bother you too often while you work, instead inviting you to take a well-deserved reading break from time to time. -- disclaimer: I am not affiliated with the developer(s) of this extension in any way. I just really like what they've done with this product and thought I'd pass it on to you in hopes that it'll help you stay more up-to-date while coding.
