USS Splendid (1846) USS Splendid was a steamship in the United States Navy. She was ordered on 27 April 1846 from Boston Navy Yard; launched on 2 July 1846, and commissioned on 24 January 1847, Commander John S. Phelps in command. Service history During the Mexican–American War, Splendid patrolled in the Gulf of Mexico as an observation ship, thus serving as part of the American fleet observing the siege of Vera Cruz and the capture of Mexico City. She also operated off Mobile Bay and in the Mississippi River. For her service in the war, Splendid received the thanks of the Congress of the United States on 23 April 1847. From 1849 to 1852, she was used as a floating laboratory by J. V. Morgan, commanding naval officer of the Brooklyn Navy Yard. This was a short-lived assignment due to Splendid's exploding boiler on 18 May 1850. As of 1868, the logbook of the at last showed that the old gunboat was still in use, and in January 1869 she was transferred to the Navy Yard at Mare Island. On 27 May 1869, she arrived at Mare Island to be sold. References
